

Rebekah Schulz holds a Bachelor of Music degree from St. Olaf College (Northfield, MN) and a Master of Sacred Music degree from Luther Seminary (St. Paul, MN). A seasoned conductor, she has served churches in Connecticut, Minnesota, and Massachusetts where she has led children's and adult choirs, taught early childhood music classes, and run music classes and camps for elementary and middle school children. She is certified in the Orff-Schulwerk music education philosophy and is completing her certification in the Kodály music education philosophy. Rebekah believes that there is no more beautiful sound in the world than the sound of young people singing together. She lives in New Hampshire with her husband and two young daughters.
